Form, gesture and change

Rooted in oil painting and printmaking, my practice extends into digital still and moving images. I explore forms as they emerge, gather and dissolve, moving between recognisable subjects and abstraction.

Water, folds of colour and floral forms recur throughout this work. Deep blue, vermilion and ivory gather into dense shapes before opening into translucent layers, fine lines and splashes. These shifts allow weight and lightness to coexist within a single image.

My attention to colour, texture and the space around a form comes from painting and printmaking. A flower may appear to become water; a current may resemble a brushstroke. Through these transformations, I invite viewers to move between recognition and uncertainty, stillness and motion.

ARTIST PROFILE

Kailan is a Los Angeles-based visual artist with a background in oil painting and printmaking. Her practice spans traditional and digital media, exploring water, light and organic forms through painterly and calligraphic gestures.

PRESENTATION	Colour, sound

Translucent blue and pale green forms unfold over time, suggesting water, folded fabric and flowing pigment. As their contours shift, the image moves between abstraction and recognition. The work invites sustained looking through a quiet tension between movement and stillness.
